SONIC-GRAMS!

THIS JUST IN!

By the time you read this, it will be old news, but SONIC X is ready to hit the FOX BOX on Saturday mornings.

I checked out their website and saw just a tease of Sonic's new toon. I've been hearing about Sonic X for almost a year now through my contacts at Sega (and afterwards from the fans themselves). Some have even been lucky enough to see the Japanese release and have given translated synopses to others. As this is the brainchild of Yuji Naka, creator of all things Sonic, he has his own spin on the Sonic adventures, as seen in the video games he has created over the years. And though it has nothing to do with the comic book continuity we have been publishing for over ten years, it is great to see Sonic back on television again, in any form besides through the video game console. With a sneak peak on August 23, 2003, and the series making its official debut every Saturday starting September 6, 2003 (check your local listings for channels and times), I for one will be in front of the tube, as it's sure to be "Sonic Blast."

Catch you on the flip . . .

SONIC THE HEDGEHOG

NO. 128

Well, Sonic fans, even though we tried to catch up to your letters last month, it just wasn't enough. Therefore, for the second month in a row, we will try to catch up (for good this time), and extended our letters page to two pages. So, without further adieu, let's get to your latest letters, shall we...?

Dear Sonic-grams,

When SONIC comics came out years ago, I was thrilled to be able to collect the adventures of my favorite video game character. However, I lost interest in them as I grew older. But recently I flipped through #124 at the store and then checked out the comic encyclopedia at sonichq.com, and what I found was that over the years the stories have grown up and branched out to include a huge cast of interesting characters. I also enjoyed the fact that the plotlines have matured as to include more adult themes like growing up, loss, and love. Because of this, I have rekindled my love for SONIC comics.

Being an anime fan, I really enjoy comics that are drawn in the manga style, and I especially love the covers that are colorful and filled with action. The shout-out to Star Wars on #114's cover was both stylish and well done.

That being said, I do have a few problems with the comic. First is a complaint that many have voiced in the letters section; that the stories of each comic are too quick. I agree with this. As the plot starts to get good, the story ends or must be continued into the next issue. I know that every issue can't be a 48 page special, but it's dizzying when all the action is happening a mile a minute and then it all abruptly ends. This is how the Sonic portion of every comic is, but the Knuckles side has done very well keeping pace with the reader. I found myself enjoying his stories more than Sonic's.

Secondly, there are times in the comics when interesting storylines are cut down or eliminated because they are too adult (i.e.: heavy violence during fights and character romance). Though I think the comic has handled these issues well, a writer could open up many different plot lines by adding context designed towards older readers. But, considering that it is Sonic the Hedgehog, I don't think Sega would want their mascot getting too out of control. Just food for thought. Finally, in the letters section readers often ask how to become an artist for the comic, but what about if someone wants to become a writer? Do the writers also have to be artists? I'm sure there are a lot of people with story ideas who would love to have their creations brought to life. Is it possible to contribute to the comic? I would like to know.

Thank you very much,

Kevin S.

Having been responsible for giving Dawn Best her shot, I'd be the last one to never say never. However, that said, the first thing you have to be aware of is how competitive getting a gig like this is, whether it's Sonic, Archie or any other comic series. Once that sinks in, the best thing you can do is just write stories about anything and everything with the intent of submitting them to someone, anyone, for publication. The more often you make a sale, the more doors you tear down and the more likely you are to attain your dream. Good luck.

Dear Sonic Crew,

I just finished reading Sonic #125 and I have got to say that it blew me away. Everything came together to make the issue really great. The cover art is really awesome looking. I really think you should make a poster of it (or something similar). You know, one of those wall scroll type things (like 2 ft by 3 ft or so), except maybe extend it a bit and lose the big 125 in the center. I think you'd make a lot of money off of it.) Anyways, on to the story... The alien thing was a tad weird but I think it worked pretty well. The first half really made it so I couldn't wait to get this issue and watch Sonic and the whole planet battle the Xorda. It was interesting how you switched people working on each chapter to give each part of the story a different visual to it. And it was a really big plus how long the story was, as opposed to the usual two or three or so stories packed inside an issue.

The story itself was amazing. Almost every few pages had a surprise waiting for me, starting with the first. I liked their explanation of Mobian mythology tied in with the extermination of the humans. And the cool robot was pretty awesome. Reminded me of the special (SSS #9, I believe) where Sonic travels to a reverse dimension. The robot only fought for about a page, but it looked pretty neat. Of course, I don't really understand how the robot could use Sonic as a battery if his feet weren't moving. And if they forced him to move fast enough, why couldn't the machine power itself? Then again, maybe I'm just thinking too much into it!

The quantum dial was a neat weapon and it had lots of defense to get through (I just find it strange the Xorda didn't attack after it was destroyed). I enjoyed watching all the inhabitants of Mobius attack the quantum dial. Very nice way to bring back missed characters (maybe you should do a mini-story with Tails and Fiona. I think that would be neat). And the return of Knuckles was just cool. Too bad he lost his powers returning, but at least he helped save everyone (by the way, he looks really cool in that trench coat thing). And the ending with all the text worked very well with the pictures. It gave a sad atmosphere to Sonic's "death." And thanks to the epilogue, I can't wait for 4 more weeks until the next issue comes out.

The message from Yuji Naka was pretty cool, too. It reminded me how far Sonic has come, and how far he's going to go. I really hope you continue the series for many years to come. And please, give my poster idea a thought, will you? ;)

That's an idea that's been floated from time to time, Jonathan. Maybe if enough of you express support it might one day become reality. Stranger things have been known to happen, y'know?

Dear Sonic & Crew,

First of all, thank you. My name is Sandy-John "Whiz" Lonethunder. I do believe that I sent ya a letter before. I think it was printed in Ish #106 (way back when). I told ya about my love for the very first Sonic video game, the TV series, and how I came across the comic series. I told ya that I grew up with "The 'Hog" as I was a few weeks away from turning 18 at that time. Now I'm 19 years old and just finished reading #125. Congratulations, that's no small feat. I'd just like to thank Archie Comics, editors (JG), writers, artists (who are all awesome, and Dawn, I bet you're just as beautiful as your art!) plus everyone else involved. Thank you and thanks for the memories. Thank you to Spaz for all the awesome covers, I really look up to you as a fellow artist. Also, a serious thank you for Yuji Naka and The Sonic Team, without whom none of this would be possible. Naka-San, Thank you. You're all a big part of my life. Whoo! Here's to the next 125 issues and the next 12 years of sonic!

S-Jay, Still Juvin'!

And S-Jay was far from the only one who expressed such sentiments:

Dear Sonic Grams and Co.

I'm amazed. You really out did yourselves in issues #118-124, but #125 was truly something special. It got to me in a way that was just so different that words can't describe how I felt (I read it five times the day I got it!). Believe it or not, since issue #0 (which sadly I no longer have) I knew the comic was going to be as big as the blue blur himself (I've been obsessed with Sonic since his first Javiegame when I was 10). Over the past twelve years, I've followed his progress as best as I could, and to see it evolve so much is so way past cool! After #125 I really felt like I had to thank you guys for keeping so true to the blue dude with attitude. Sad to say I've missed way too many issues, but I still try to keep track, which brings up my next point, for some time now you guys said you would bring everyone up to speed on the comics past so I want to know if this will be soon. Also I heard a rumor you were planning to release #118-125 in some sort of special pack, or something along those lines, and I just wanted to know if this was true (I missed #119 and #120, but I heard they were great). By the way, the 'zine' cover art is perfect, don't change it. There's not much left to say other than the obvious fact that the comic is still extremely cool and going strong, even after a decade. Please continue making the best hero around as cool as he should be. Oh, I almost forgot to say 'nice job' on how the art switches from chapter to chapter in issue #125. Thanks for taking the time to read this and keep up the outstanding job.

Your ever loyal Sonic fan

Greetings to all the fine people at Archie,

I just got issues #124 and #125, and all I've got to say is WOW! I can't wait to see what happens! But in issue #124 I was immediately floored by the fact that Mobius is Earth. Now all of this is perfectly fine, and makes a great deal of sense, except for a couple of problems: In Sonic Super Special #7, Sonic and the Freedom Fighters go to Earth and they get there via the Cosmic Interstate. Sonic also travels to an Earth much more like ours in Sonic Live (#1). If either of these are in fact our Earth then that opens a startling range of possibilities. The cosmic interstate could be used for time travel, or each second exists in a different zone. The first possibility seems much more likely. Also, one theory about black holes says that they can act as wormholes to other times, places, or even dimensions, could this be what happened to Sonic?

I'm very interested in hearing your answer, especially with regards to the time travel issue. Did you guys make a mistake, or do I have something here?

Keep up the good work,
zfreak2004

Very observant of you, zfreak2004... but it is a little too soon to explain just yet. That is something that will be covered in a future issue.

As for this issue, it's a wrap, people. We'll see you in thirty.
